The French Revolution

The French Revolution is regarded as a remarkable event in the history of the world. The storming of the Bastille prison on 14 July 1789 marked the beginning of the French Revolution.

Causes of the French Revolution

Inequalities in French Society

- French society was divided into three estates. The first estate consisted of the clergymen, the second estate consisted of the nobles and the third estate consisted of the common people most of whom were peasants.
- While the peasants comprised about 90% of the French population, only few owned lands. 60% of the land was owned by the members of the first two estates.
- One of the many reasons why the revolution broke out was because only the members of the third estate paid taxes to the state. The members of the first and second estates were exempted from paying any taxes to the king.
- The nobility and the clergy enjoyed many privileges in French society. The nobles extracted feudal dues from the peasants. The latter were also compelled to provide services to the noblemen by working in his fields and house. They also had to serve in the army.
- The church also collected religious taxes from the people known as 'tithes'. The members of the third estate had to pay direct tax to the state known as 'taille'. Indirect taxes were imposed on tobacco, salt and many other everyday items. Thus, the third estate was seething with financial difficulties.

The Rise of the Middle Class

- There was the rise and emergence of many social groups in France in the eighteenth century. They were traders, businessmen, lawyers and teachers. The traders and businessmen had acquired wealth through overseas trade.
- The administrative officials, lawyers and teachers were educated and believed that no group should be given special privileges merely on the basis of birth. They believed that the members of the first two estates should also pay taxes to the state.
- The middle class in France was inspired by the writings of social thinkers and philosophers. John Locke and Jean Jacques Rousseau were two such thinkers who rejected the idea of the divine right of the king. Rousseau propounded that the Government should be based on a social contract drawn between the people and the Government.
- These ideas of philosophers were discussed everywhere—in coffee shops and in salons—and spread among the common people. Inspired by these ideas, people began to oppose the special privileges enjoyed by the members of the first and second estates.
- The educated youth in France were inspired by the rights of liberty and equality which were ensued in the American Revolution.
- When the people learned that the king was planning to further increase taxes, they rose in revolt.

The Revolt Breaks

- Wars had drained the French treasury. The state was under heavy debt and had to pay hefty interests to creditors. To improve the finances of the state, the king decided to increase the taxes levied on people.
- When the king called the meeting of an assembly of the Estates Generals to pass proposals of new taxes, the members of the third estate walked out from the meeting demanding that every person in the Assembly should have one vote contrary to the existing practice of one estate having one vote.
- The members of the third estate assembled in the indoor tennis court on 20 June 1789 determined to draft a constitution which would limit the powers of the king.

Storming of the prison of Bastilles

- During this time, the prices of bread rose in France and bakers began to hoard supplies. Agitated by the Unavailability of bread, people including women stormed into shops. When the king ordered his troops to move into Paris, an agitated crowd stormed into the prison of Bastilles and liberated its prisoners.

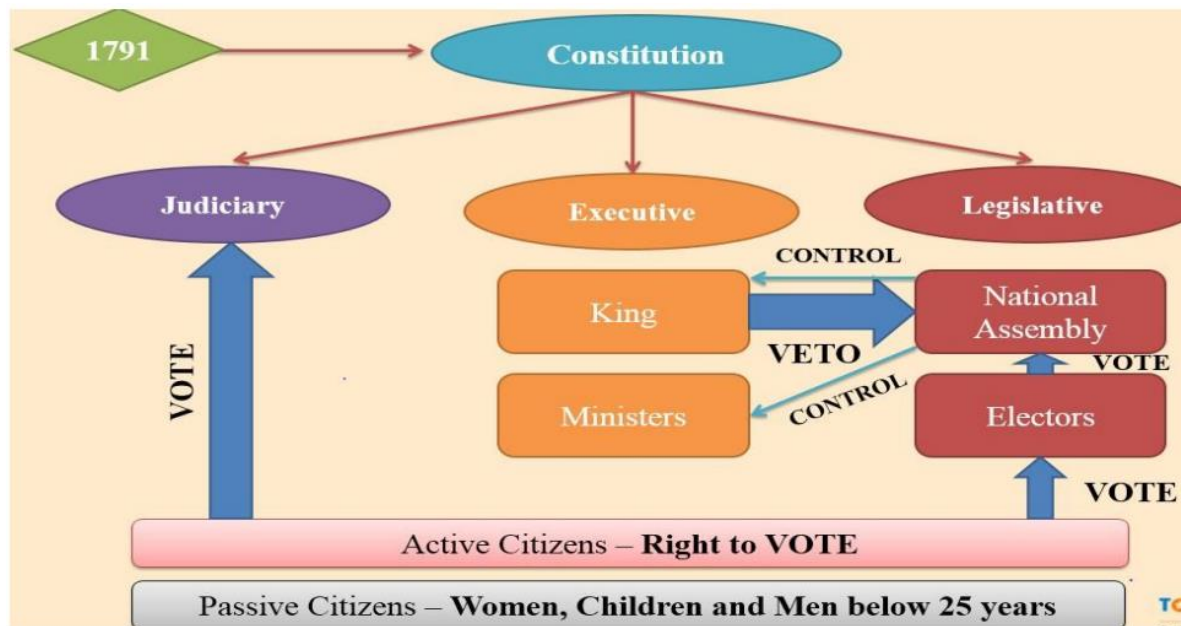

- As the number of revolts began to grow, the French monarch recognised the French Assembly. His powers could now be checked by the Constitution.

France Becomes a Constitutional Monarchy

- The National Assembly consisting of the members of the third estate drafted the Constitution which limited the powers of the king, and the executive, legislative and judicial powers were assigned to different institutions.

- The National Assembly had the powers to frame laws for the country. The members of the National Assembly were elected by the body of electorates. This body of electorates was elected by citizens who paid taxes to the Government who were termed active citizens. Other men and all women had no voting rights.
- The Constitution of France guaranteed the right to life, freedom of speech, freedom of opinion and equality before law.

Abolition of Monarchy in France

- Because the powers of King Louis XVI were reduced, he asked for help from the Prussian and Austrian monarchies. However, the revolutionaries in France formed a large army and declared a war against Prussia and Austria.
- The Jacobin Club in France was formed by the revolutionary forces of the country. It included small shopkeepers, watch makers, pastry cooks, printers, daily wage earners and servants.
- In 1792, when the supplies of bread reduced, the Jacobins along with people stormed the Tuileries Palace and imprisoned the royal family of France.
- This development led to the changes in the Constitution. Elections were held and everyone more than 21 years of age was given the right to vote. Monarchy was abolished and France became a republic.

- King Louis XVI was executed publicly on 21 January 1793 on the charges of treason. His queen, Mary Antoinette was also executed later.

Reign of Terror

- The period from 1793 to 1794 is called the Reign of Terror. Robespierre, the head of the Jacobin Club, followed the policy of severe control and punishment. Clergymen, nobles and people who were considered enemies to the republic were guillotined. He even ordered the killing of his own party members who did not agree to his methods and ways.
- Robespierre's government put a definite limit on the wages and the prices of essential goods. Meat and bread were rationed. Peasants were also forced to sell grains at a price fixed by the Government. Churches were closed.
- Robespierre followed his policies so strictly that even his supporters turned against him. Finally, he was convicted by a court in July 1794 and was guillotined.

Robespierre

- After the fall of the Jacobin Government, the wealthier middle class took the power into their own hands. They introduced a constitution which did not give voting rights to the non-propertied class.

The period from 1793 to 1794 is referred to as the Reign of Terror. Robespierre followed a policy of severe control and punishment. However, Robespierre was himself sent to the guillotine in July 1794

Directory Rules France

Fall of the Jacobin government allowed the wealthier middle class to seize power

New Constitution was introduced which denied the vote to non-propertied sections of society

Two legislative councils were elected, who then appointed a Directory, an executive made of five members

Directors often clashed with legislative Councils and the latter sought to dismiss them

Political instability of the Directory paved the way for the rise of military dictator Napoleon Bonaparte

Napoleon Bonaparte

A Directory, an executive council was appointed consisting of five members. This executive council frequently clashed with the legislative councils. This political instability paved a way for the rise of military dictatorship under Napoleon Bonaparte.

Women's Participation in the Revolution

- Women were active participants in the French Revolution. Women in France were not empowered.
- Most of the women of the third estate had to work to earn their livelihood. They worked as seamstresses, sold flowers and vegetables or worked as domestic servants in the houses of wealthy families.
- Women started their own clubs in order to raise their own voices. A famous women's club was the Society of Revolutionary Republican Women. This club demanded that women be given the same political rights as men. Women till now had no right to vote.
- In the beginning, many laws were implemented to improve the condition of women in French society. Schooling was made compulsory for all girls. Fathers could no longer marry off their daughters without obtaining their consent. Divorce was made legal, and women began to be trained for various jobs.
- During the Reign of Terror, many laws were issued which ordered the closing of women's clubs. Many women were tried and guillotined.
- Women's struggle to demand equal voting rights however continued. The French women were finally granted voting rights in 1946.

Olympe de Gouges was politically active in revolutionary France. She protested against the Constitution and the Declaration of Rights of Man and Citizen because they did not even give basic political rights to women. Thus, in 1791, she wrote a Declaration of the Rights of Woman and Citizen. In 1793, Olympe de Gouges criticised the Jacobin government for forcibly closing down women's clubs. She was later charged with treason and executed.

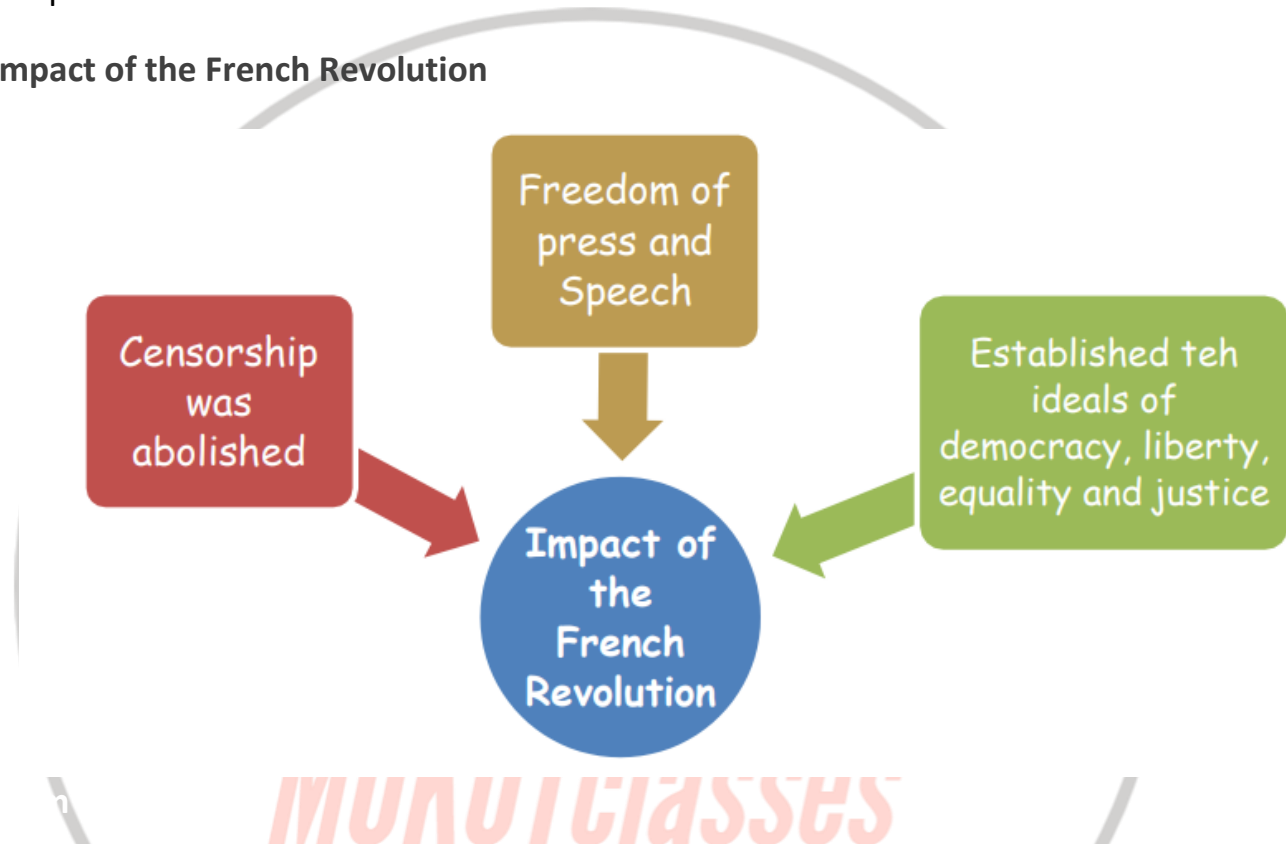

The Abolition of Slavery

- One of the important reforms of the Jacobin Club was the abolition of slavery in French colonies.
- Slaves were brought from Africa by the Europeans and were then sold to plantation owners. Because of the employment of slaves in the colonies, the growing demands for sugar, coffee and indigo by the European markets were met.

- The system of slavery was hardly criticised in France. This was because slaves were important in the plantations.
- After being banned by the Jacobins, slavery was again reintroduced by Napoleon Bonaparte.

The Impact of the French Revolution

- The political instability in France paved a way for the rise of military dictatorship under Napoleon Bonaparte.
- He along with his troops carried on the ideas of the French Revolution in Europe. He introduced laws such as protection of private property and the uniform systems of weights and measurements.
- Many of his measures that carried the revolutionary ideas of liberty and modern laws to other parts of Europe had an impact on people long after Napoleon had left.
- However, he also placed his successors on the throne of the countries which he invaded. He thus came to be regarded as an invader.

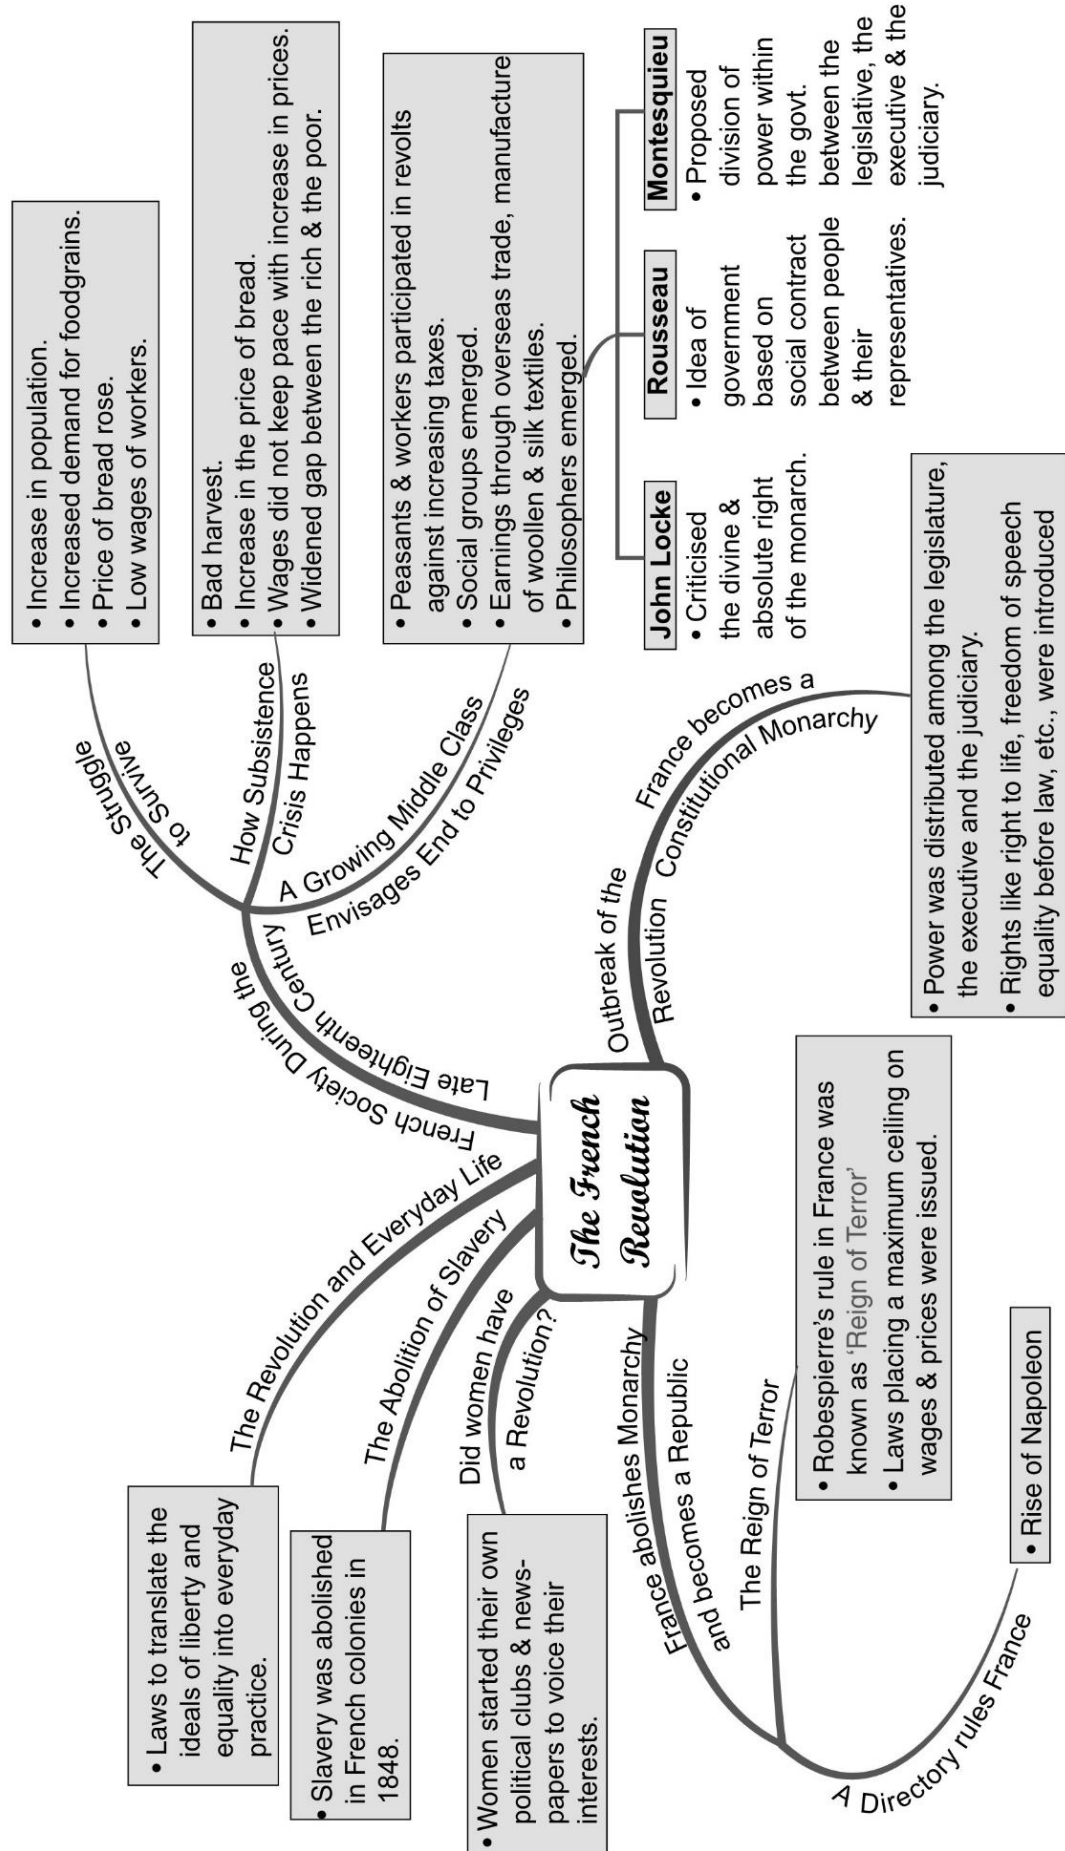

Napoleon Bonaparte

The ideas of liberty, equality and democratic rights were the greatest gifts of the French Revolution to the world.

In India, Tipu Sultan and Raja Ram Mohan Roy keenly observed the French Revolution and exalted the ideals of the French Revolution.

government offices or universities, the state was forced to increase taxes.

10. The term Old Regime is usually used to describe the society and institutions of France before 1789.

Short Answer:

Ans: 1. The following events took place on 14th July 1789.

(a) The king had ordered the troops to move into the city. There were rumours that he would soon order the troops to open fire upon citizens.

(b) Around 7,000 men and women formed a militia and broke into a number of government buildings in search of arms.

(c) Then the fortress-prison of Bastille was stormed by hundreds of people with the hope to find hoarded ammunition. Bastille was destroyed completely as it was hated by all.

Ans: 2. The causes for empty treasury at the time of his accession were as follows.

(a) The financial resources of France had drained due to the long years of war.

(b) The high cost of maintaining an extravagant court at the immense palace of Versailles also added to the financial drain.

(c) France had helped the thirteen American colonies to gain their independence from Britain. This increased the debt to more than 2 billion livres.

Ans: 3. Before the French Revolution, the French society was divided into three estates.

(a) The 1st estate was comprised of the Church and the clergy. They enjoyed certain privileges by birth. The most important of these privileges was exemption from paying taxes.

(b) The 2nd estate was comprised of the nobles and other rich people of the society. These were also exempted from paying taxes. They also enjoyed feudal privileges which included collection of feudal dues by the peasants.

(c) The 3rd estate was comprised of big businessmen, merchants, court officials, lawyers, peasants, artisans, landless labourers and servants. Within the third estate, some were rich and others were poor. The peasants obliged the landlords by working on their fields, in their houses, to serve in the army or to participate in the building of roads. They were paying all direct taxes like taille and a number of indirect taxes on salt or tobacco, but had no rights.

Ans: 4. The following points show how the subsistence crisis occurred in France during the Old Regime.

(a) The population of France increased from 23 million in 1715 to 28 million in 1789. This led to the increase in demand for foodgrains.

(b) When the production of foodgrains could not keep pace with the growing demand, the price of bread which was the staple food increased rapidly.

(c) On the other hand, the wages could not keep pace with the rise in prices. At the time of drought or hail, harvest reduced and things got worsed. Thus, the gap between the poor and the rich widened and this led to the subsistence crisis.

Ans: 5. The following points describe the middle class in French society.

(a) The middle class was a social group that emerged in France in the 18th century. This class made money through an expanding overseas trade and by manufacturing goods like woollen and silk textiles.

(b) The middle class, along with merchants and manufacturers, included professionals like lawyers and administrative officials.

(c) All these people were educated believed that no group in society should be privileged by birth and a person's position in society should be based on his merit.

Ans: 6. The third estate representatives viewed themselves as spokesmen for the whole French nation. They assembled in the hall of an indoor tennis court in the grounds of Versailles on 20 June 1789. There they declared themselves as a National Assembly.

Ans: 7. While the National Assembly was busy at Versailles drafting the constitution, the rest of France seethed with turmoil in the following ways.

- (a) A severe winter had meant a bad harvest, resulting in rising price of bread thus, the situation was exploited by bakers and hoarded supplies. Angry women stormed into the shops after standing for long hours in bakery queues.
- (b) The army was ordered by the king to move into the city. There were rumours that army would be ordered to open fire upon the citizens. Thousands of agitated people gathered and decided to form a militia.
- (c) They broke into a number of government buildings in search of arms. They destroyed the prison of Bastille on 14 July 1789.

Long Answer:

Ans: 1. The following are the main causes of French Revolution:

- (a) Despotic rule of Louis XVI. Long years of wars and extravagance of the king led to financial crises in France. This forced king to increase taxes mostly paid by the third estate. It created chaos in the society.
- (b) Privileges and Burdens of the French Society. First and the second estate had certain privileges by birth. The first two estates were comprised of the clergy and nobility which was 10% of the total population. Rest of the 90% population made up the third estate that paid all the various direct and indirect taxes. This discrimination led to the revolution by the 3rd estate.
- (c) Rising prices. The population of France had increased. This resulted into more demand of foodgrains. So, the price of bread rose rapidly, the poor were not able to buy the high-priced bread. So, the gap between the rich and poor widened.
- (d) Inspiration by the Philosophers. The philosophers like Locke, Rousseau and Montesquieu spread the ideas of having a society where the people enjoy freedom, equal laws and equal opportunities. They inspired the people of France to realise their dreams.
- (e) Role of Middle class. Another major cause was the role of the middle class who earned their wealth through expanding trade of manufactured goods, being exported.
- (f) Storming of Bastille prison. During the political turmoil, France experienced severe winters leading to bad harvest. The price of bread increased, as the stocks were hoarded in the market. Angry women attacked the shops. At the same time troops were ordered into Paris. Agitated crowd stormed and destroyed Bastille prison administrative officials, i.e., those who were educated. They believed that no person in the society should be privileged by birth.

Ans: 2. The following events/incidents led to the outbreak of the French Revolution:

- (a) Meeting of the Estate General. On 5 May 1789, Louis XVI had called a meeting of Estate General to increase the taxes. Representatives of all the three estates came.

But the members of the 3rd estate were made to stand while women, peasants, artisans and women were not allowed entry to the assembly.

- (b) Demand for one vote one person. The third estate at the meeting of the Estate General demanded one vote for each member. This demand was rejected by the king and the members of the third estate walked out in protest.
- (c) Meeting of the newly-formed National Assembly. Since the members of the third estate were more, they considered themselves the voice of the people/whole nation. They assembled in the indoor tennis court of Versailles and declared themselves as the 'National Assembly'. They believed in removing the feudal privileges of the nobles and clergy.
- (d) Winters created worse situation. Harvest declined, prices rose and bakers exploited poor by hoarding supplies. Angry crowd stormed the shops.
- (e) Revolt in the countryside by the peasants. There were rumours that their ripe crops would be destroyed by the lords hired bands. The peasants in several districts seized hoes and pitchforks and attacked manors of the lords. They looted the hoarded grains and burnt the documents containing the records of manorial dues.

Ans: 3. The philosophers influenced the thinking of the people of France in the following ways:

- (a) Philosophers such as John Locke and Jean Jacques Rousseau put forward ideas envisaging a society based on freedom and equal laws and opportunities for all.
- (b) In Two Treatises of Government, John Locke sought to refute the doctrine of the divine and absolute rights of the monarch.
- (c) His ideas were carried forward by Rousseau as he was proposing a form of government based on social contract between the people and their representatives.
- (d) In The Spirit of the Laws, Montesquieu proposed a division of power within the government between the legislative, the executive and the judiciary.
- (e) The ideas of these philosophers were discussed intensively in salons and coffee-houses and were spread among people through books and newspapers.

Ans: 4. (a) The constitution of 1791 was the first written constitution in France, created after the collapse of the absolute rule.

- (b) Its main aim was to limit the powers of the monarch.
- (c) Powers were then divided/separated and assigned to different institutions like legislative, executive and judiciary.
- (d) According to this, active citizens of France elected electors who in turn voted to elect the National Assembly.
- (e) Not all citizens had the right to vote. Only men of 25 years of age who paid taxes equal to at least three days of a labourer's wage. They were called active citizens.

(f) The remaining men and all women were called the passive citizens.

(g) The National Assembly controlled the king. France became constitutional monarchy.
(any five points)

Ans: 5. Most of the people (i.e. men and women) in the 18th century. France could not read and write. So images and symbols instead of printed books were used to communicate ideas. These symbols were used to convey the content of declaration of rights. The important symbols were:

(a) Broken Chains: Chains were used to restrain the slaves from running away. Broken chains signify the act of becoming free.

(b) A bundle of rods: It was used to convey the message that strength lies in unity.
